

WHITEHAWK

Native American and Ethnographic Art

Show and Sale

August 9-12, 2024

SANTA FE, NM: Buyers and sellers, collectors and curators have been traveling to Santa Fe, New Mexico each August for the last 46 years to experience the largest offering of vintage Native American and ethnographic art on the planet—The Whitehawk Show and Sale.

Whitehawk features vintage Native American baskets, beadwork, weavings, jewelry and Western art, as well as carvings, textiles and rare tribal objet d'art from around the world.

The Whitehawk Native American and Ethnographic Art Show draws significant media attention, and to address that, show producer Kim Martindale has added a special team to facilitate coverage.

Members of the press can expect:

- Immediate access to large number of hi resolution images
- Opportunities to interview buyers, sellers and museum representatives who have returned to the Whitehawk Show for decades, by phone or in person.
- Conversations with Native American artisans to discuss the components of weaving, potting, jewelry and more, by phone or in person.
- Interviews with collectors and enthusiasts to tell you why they return to the Whitehawk Show year after year. By phone or in person.
- Guided tour of the Whitehawk Show by producer Kim Martindale

SIDEBAR: This year Whitehawk features a special exhibit focusing on the rising genre of 19th Century Navajo-woven child's blankets. Curated by weaving expert Robert Parsons.

SIDEBAR: A fascinating look at more than 200 miniature Native American baskets, perhaps the most comprehensive collection ever assembled. Curated by basketry authority Jan Duggan.
